Min Likely to Review Peak Power Demand Forecast

Shilpa Samant

New Delhi: The power ministry may review the projected peak power demand for the next couple of months given the changes in weather conditions during ongoing summer season, said people familiar with the matter. It is holding discussions on the issue and could initiate a review through the Grid Controller of India on the basis of the anticipated projection by the India Meteorological Department (IMD) for June which is expected by May-end, they said. The Grid Controller of India expects some revision based on the IMD's projection, said one of the persons, who did not wish to be identified. Peak power demand for the country in May was expected to be 200 GW but so far it has reached only 238 GW, thanks to the favourable weather conditions. In contrast, May 2024 saw the highest demand at 250 GW. For June, the projected peak demand is 209 GW. According to the IMD, May was expected to have above normal heat wave days in many parts of the northwest and central India and adjoining east India. The national weather forecaster had also indicated above normal rainfall during May. However, the number of heat days have been lower than projected, according to government officials, and the monsoon set in a week early. "Seeing the current trend, it will be revised as the maximum we have touched this month is 220 (220.89 GW)," another senior government official told ET on condition of anonymity. Roshni Rajgop, joint managing director, Indian Energy Exchange (IEX), told ET that unseasonal rains and thunderstorms in May kept temperatures low, resulting in a 3.7% year-on-year decline in electricity consumption during May 2024. At the same time, increased hydro, wind and thermal generation created surplus availability, bringing down real time market prices, Baisa said.

At Its Peak

RURAL BOOST Draft Bill Moots Online Property Registrations

Our Bureau

New Delhi: The rural development ministry has unveiled the draft Registration Bill, 2025, introducing provisions for online registration of properties, electronic presentation and admission of documents, issuance of electronic registration certificates, and digital maintenance of records. Once made into a law, it will replace the 117-year-old Registration Act of 1908. It aims to reduce physical documentations, boost transparency in property transactions and ease of living. The bill also expands the list of documents in property transactions that will require mandatory registration. These documents include agreements to sell, powers-of-attorney, sale certificates issued by authorities, equitable mortgage arrangements, and certain instruments based on court orders. The Department of Land Resources under the rural development ministry has sought stakeholders' comments on the draft bill by June 25. The bill says Aadhaar-based authentication with informed consent is permitted, alongside alternative verification mechanisms for individuals who do not possess Aadhaar or choose not to use it. It also allows electronic integration with other record-keeping systems to bolster the efficiency and integrity of information flows. The bill also makes it tougher for officers to deny registration on flimsy grounds, stipulating clear and objective grounds for this purpose. It also introduces an enabling provision for authorities to issue rules on consolidation of registration subject to certain standards, including compliance with principles of natural justice.
